

Through performance-based artwork, I am able to create situations for myself, in order to experience my life differently than I do on a normal day-to-day basis. Through this "experiential" art, I can experiment with my life and allow others to participate and follow along with the processes that I go through. While I am learning and answering my own questions, I hope to engage the viewers' interest and inspire them to think about the questions they may have about their own experiences and to think about their ordinary lives with a different perspective.

education, experience, exploration
Jennifer Barron

