

A brush with death.

A brush with death. The Pillar of Shame, a sculpture erected to mark the eighth anniversary of the 1989 crackdown in Tiananmen Square, is given a fresh coat of red paint at the University of Hong Kong, an annual ritual in the run-up to the June 4 commemoration for the past 13 years. The statue was first erected in Victoria Park before being moved to HKU. Photo: Robert Ng

A brush with death. The Pillar of Shame, a sculpture erected to mark the eighth anniversary of the 1989 crackdown in Tiananmen Square, is given a fresh coat of red paint at the University of Hong Kong, an annual ritual in the run-up to the June 4 commemoration for the past 13 years. The statue was first erected in Victoria Park before being moved to HKU. Photo: Robert Ng